The deterioration in the overall asset quality of banks – gross Non-Performing Assets (NPAs) are reportedly 27% higher at the end of December 2009 than at the end of December 2008 – is not surprising. Any slowdown in growth is bound to trigger a rise in NPAs as more and more companies default on loan repayments. The effect would be pronounced when the slowdown coincides with the severe global recession. But for the restructuring of loans permitted by the Central Bank on fairly generous terms, NPAs would have been still higher. Prudent banks that took care while sanctioning loans and then monitored the post-sanction disbursement diligently should be able to weather the crisis. But it is one thing to have NPAs rise because of a cyclical downturn, it is quite another to have NPAs rise because of policy errors that are entirely within the realm of policymakers. And this is what we need to guard against. Excessively low interest rates skew the risk-reward equation by making projects that are actually not viable, appear viable-till interest rates reverse and the same projects cease to be viable! It is now well established that long periods of unduly low interest rates encourage banks to take more risks. A low interest rate regime driven by an easy money policy rather than macroeconomic fundamentals leads to excessive expansion of credit. It incentivizes banks to take on more risk in search of higher returns and to misprice risk.

36. Low interest rate on credit reduces the capacity to absorb various unaccounted risk factors.
37. Banks' NPAs occur only due to economic factors.
38. The Central Bank always allows banks to restructure their loans in the event of rise in NPAs
39. Lower interest rate cycle projects commercially unviable projects as viable.
40. Higher NPAs indicate shortcomings in disbursement and follow-up of credit given by banks.

Directions (Q. 46-50) In each of these questions there are two sets of figures. The figures on the left are Problem Figures (four figures and one question-marked space) and those on the right are Answer Figures indicated by number 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. A series is established if one of the five Answer Figures is placed at the "question-marked space". Questions Figures form a series if they change from left to right according to some rule. The number of the Answer Figure which should be placed in the question-marked space is the answer. All the five figures i.e., four Problem Figures and one answer Figure placed in the question-marked space should be considered as forming the series.

Study the following question.

Problem Figures

Answer Figures

If we place the Answer Figure 4 in the question-marked space it makes a series which indicates that one vertical line is added in each figure. So the answer is '4'. Note that if we go by only one aspect of 'number of lines'. Answer figure 3 may also fit in. So you have to consider all different aspects.

Now solve the following questions.
