1. Read the passage given below and answer the questions that follow : $1 \times 5 = 5$

Time-out is a short period of rest during a game. It also involves making the child stop all activity and sit silently for sometime. It should be explained in advance if the child is old enough to understand and it should be used for specific penalty. The first step is to choose a thoroughly boring spot in the house. A chair facing a corner is a good choice. A useful guide to the duration of the time out is one minute per year of age. Some parents find it helpful to use a portable timer that rings when the 'penalty' is over. And once the bell rings, the parents should not initiate further discussion of the child's behaviour for which being punished.

P.T.O.

In the past the mobile phone was used for voice application and person to person contact. In the future the demand will shift towards data and multimedia services rather than voice. According to estimates, by 2015 mobile traffic is expected to grow 23 fold that of today, with 90% being multimedia. A wide range of services will be available to the mobile users conveniently and securely via the 4G core Network. Personal communications, information systems and entertainment will be merged into a seamless pool of content. In an increasingly mobile phone-dependent society, we need to carefully consider what sort of social implications there could be as a result of the availability of such high level services practically anywhere, anytime. Many might become totally hooked to their personal mobile device and it may affect their social skills. The availability of on-demand entertainment services will play a major role in this regard.
