On 10 April, 1912, the largest and finest luxury ship in the world sailed from Southampton in England to New York. She was called the Titanic and it was her first voyage. She was crossing the Atlantic and she was carrying more than two thousand people.

She was a ship built with great care. Everyone thought that she could never sink. They called her 'the unsinkable ship'.

The journey was very comfortable. Everyone talked and laughed. They were happy and proud because they were travelling in the best ship in the world. For four days the Titanic sailed smoothly. Then came 14 April.

The night was cold, the sky was clear and the sea was calm. Time ticked on ten O' clock, eleven half-past eleven

Eleven forty ! On top of the ship, the man who kept watch suddenly saw an iceberg which stood right in the path of the Titanic. He telephoned the engine-room. Captain Smith and his crew fought hard to steer the ship away from the iceberg but its side scraped the iceberg. There was a big shower of ice on the decks. There were also big holes along the ship's side through which water began to pour into the engine room and lower decks. Captain Smith and his crew tried to stop it but they failed. They now knew that the Titanic was in great danger. Captain Smith began to send radio signals at twelve-fifteen. 'Help Struck An Iceberg'.

A ship called the California was only about 18 kilometres away, but she did not receive the Titanic's signals. This was because her radio had been shut at 12 O' clock.

The Titanic continued to send signals. At last a small ship called the Carpathia heard the call, she changed course and sailed at full speed towards the Titanic. Meanwhile the Titanic was sinking rapidly. Then, at 2·20 A.M. on 15 April she vanished into the sea for ever. About fifteen-hundred people including Captain Smith, went down with her.

When the Carpathia reached the lifeboats it was 4 A.M. She was able to save only seven hundred people.

The Titanic now lies deep down at the bottom of the ocean.
